

THE LOUISVILLE DAILY DEMOCRAT.

VOLUME IX.

LOUISVILLE, KY., TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1852.

NUMBER 93.

PREFACE TO Volume and Month.

RAYMOND & PATTER keep the following articles constantly on hand, and endeavor themselves to sell as low as possible.

100 varieties of soap, Cosmopolitan fancy,

and different soaps for men, kitchen,

toilet, washes, &c., &c., &c., &c.,

the varieties of Hair Dye, instantaneous;

150 different Cosmetics and Powders;

A great variety of Pomades and Oil for the hair;

Dissolvent Powder, for removing superfluous hair;

A. L. Lister's Tonic and Gout Specific;

Turp. Soap, Mutton Arrows, Aromatic Vinegar, Bay Rum, Perfumed Water, Extracts, &c., &c., &c.,

Perfumes, Puddings, Ice Cream, &c., &c.,

Skin Liniment, Lemon Syrup, Port, Sherry, and Madeira Wine, &c., &c., &c., &c.,

Medicinal and Confectionary Goods, and Gums;

Wax, Candles, Mount Eagle Paste, for polishing glass, base, &c., &c., &c., &c.,

Wax, candle wicks, Vaseline, Paraffin, Rosin, and

Mineral Oil, &c., &c., &c., &c.,

Adhesive Gum, Resin, &c., &c., &c.,

Adhesive Resins, &c., &c., &c.,

THE DEMOCRAT.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1852.

GENERAL WORDS.—All the advertisements appearing in the Daily Democrat are transferred to our Evening Bulletin, and receive a suitable insertion in it. Thus patron of the morning paper has the advantage of an evening circulation to a distinct class of readers free of charge.

Presidential election takes place to-day.

FACE THE MUSIC!!

For the Last Time!!!

CONNECTICUT, MARYLAND, NORTH CAROLINA, & TENNESSEE! Either two or all to be taken together—$100 on each!!

Walk up, if you dare!!!

VOTE EARLY.

Let it be the object of every democrat to deposit the first vote in his respective ward. By so doing, you will then be enabled to devote the remainder of the day to the service of a safe boat near Lewiston, a few days ago.

The Concert of Madame and Monsieur Simon takes place on Thursday evening.

The large bell, manufactured by Mr. Keyes, of this city, has been placed upon the Catholic Cathedral. It weighs 4,000 pounds.

A reward of $500 is offered for the murderers of Miller and Garner, who were killed in a safe boat near Lewiston, a few days ago.

At a Fair to be held at Wheeling, Va., an effort is being made to have a more glorious cause than the prostration of the best female equestrian.

The Bill of the Rescue Fire Company which takes place on the 11th inst., will be a splendid affair. Extensive arrangements have been made.

John G. Dixie, the poet editor of Burlington, Vt., is reported to be ill, but slight hopes of his recovery are entertained by his friends.

He is a liberal, progressive Democrat, of the school of Jefferson and Jackson.

SECOND.

He is in favor of a strict construction of the Constitution and of the preservation of the rights of the States.

THIRD.

He is opposed to a National Bank, a high protective tariff, and monopolies of all kinds.

FOURTH.

He is in favor of keeping the Treasury secure from the attacks of the Galpins and the Gardiners, who have depleted it of many hundreds of thousands of dollars, under whig rule.

FIFTH.

He is in favor of reducing the expenditure of the general government to an economical standard.

SIXTH.

He is opposed to Gen. Scott's plan of requiring foreigners to serve in the army or navy in time of war two years before allowing them to exercise the right of suffrage.

SEVENTH.

He is in favor of allowing to foreigners the same privileges in regard to entering upon the public lands as natives, a measure which Graham, the whig candidate for Vice President, voted against in the United States Senate, in 1841.

EIGHTH.

He is in favor of allowing to foreigners the same privileges in regard to entering upon the public lands as natives, a measure which Graham, the whig candidate for Vice President, voted against in the United States Senate, in 1841.

NINTH.

He is in favor of striking out that provision in the Constitution of New Hampshire that prohibits Catholics from holding certain offices, and always has been.

TENTH.

He is in favor of our government pursuing such a system of foreign policy as will cause the rights of American citizens to be respected in all parts of the globe, and he will adhere strictly to the Jackson motto of "asking nothing but what is right, and submitting to nothing wrong."

ELEVENTH.

He is in favor of the Sub-Treasury law, and is opposed to any union of Bank and State.

TWELFTH.

He is in favor of the passage by Congress of such laws as will protect labor, instead of capital, which needs no protection.

THIRTEENTH.

He is in favor of retaining in the Constitution that shield of the people against corrupt legislation in Congress, the modified veto power, which Gen. Scott is in favor of striking out.

FOURTEENTH.

He is a patriot who volunteered as a private soldier, to defend the country, when she was invaded by a foreign enemy.

FIFTEENTH.

He is a man of splendid talents, and is every way qualified for the position to which his friends seek to elevate him, and in that respect he possesses a great advantage over his opponent.

SIXTEENTH.

He is a national man, and did not owe his nomination in Baltimore to sectional influences, as was the case with the whig candidate, Gen. Scott.

SEVENTEENTH.

He has not lowered the dignity of the office for which he has been nominated, by going about the country, on pretence of official business, making partisan speeches, and demagogue appeals of the lowest character, as Gen. Scott has done; but has attended in a quiet manner to his usual avocation at his place of residence.

Eighteenth.

He has not received any information respecting his nomination in Baltimore, to which he has been related to us, as follows: About two days ago, Mr. Stillwell Heady, of Spencer died, leaving two sons James and William J. Heady, James, the elder, had drawn about $5,000 at different times from his father, for which reason he was cut off in the will with $500, the rest of the estates being given to his brother. This was totally unexpected to James and it greatly exasperated him. On Sunday evening, in a state of intoxication, he attacked his brother with a knife, inflicting five or six wounds on his person. None of them are considered mortal. James Heady has a family, but W. J. Heady is a single man.

NINETEENTH.

He is opposed to the passage of any measure that will have a tendency to build up a moneyed aristocracy; or that will take power away from the many and lodge it in the few.

Twenty-first.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-second.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-third.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-fourth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-fifth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-sixth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-seventh.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-eighth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-ninth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-tenth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-first.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-second.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-third.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-fourth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-fifth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-sixth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-seventh.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-eighth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-ninth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-tenth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-eleventh.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-twelfth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-thirteenth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-fourth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-fifth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-sixth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-seventh.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-eighth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-ninth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-tenth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-eleventh.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-twelfth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-thirteenth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-fourth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-fifth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-sixth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-seventh.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-eighth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-ninth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-tenth.

He is a man of free and familiar manners—republican in his feelings and address, and contrasts most admirably with his opponent, who is proud and haughty in his deportment.

Twenty-eleventh.

He is a man of free

